Wright Family Wins Focus On Fish Health Photo Contest In Family Fun Fishing or Boating Category

A snapshot of 8-year-old Justin Wright's gleeful face as he shows his mom the large mouth bass he and his dad caught won July's Focus On Fish Health Photo Contest in the category of Family Fun Fishing and Boating. Focus On Fish Health is a public awareness project of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (USDA/APHIS).

The photo will featured on the www.FocusOnFishHealth.org website along with the other monthly winners.

The Wrights, who live in Glenville, New York were relaxing at Moreau Lake State Park, as they do just about every weekend in the summer. Justin and his father, Mike were fishing off the dock while Bernadette Wright and daughter Skylar, 8, were sunning on the beach. "When Justin ran up holding that big fish, I had to take a picture, Mrs. Wright said. "He looked so cute."

She was particularly proud of her win because she had just bought a new camera and taken a photography course as well. "It paid off!" she says.

The Wrights were interested in the USDA-sponsored Focus On Fish Health campaign, which targets recreational boaters and fishermen with information about preventing the spread of fish diseases and invasive species, because, says Mrs. Wright, "My husband, children and I are big outdoors people. We are going to be sure to protect our environment."

Contestants can submit photos all summer at www.FocusOnFishHealth.org to enter the contest. New winners are announced every month.
